The glass is complete. It includes a bowl, a stem and a foot. The bowl is conical: its base is tiny, its walls flare upwards, and the rim is straight and in line with the base. The stem is solid and made of two parts: a swollen knob with flattened ends, and a cylinder. The foot is circular and conical in profile, with a flattened knob at the top. The underside shows a trace of glass pontil. There are wear marks on the base; none other than the knob on the stem.
