Singer” sewing machine built into a wooden table. The machine is in black metal with a pedal under the table. Originally, it was pedal-driven, but a “General Electric” motor was added. The pedal still works. A bobbin of thread is still present in the lower part of the machine. Additional tools include a wooden spool, two replacement feet, a sewing guide, a yellow screwdriver, pins, 3 cans of blue, white, green, red and black thread, and a replacement needle.
