The glass is complete. It includes a bowl, a stem and a foot. The bowl is flared at the top and has a straight rim. The stem is hollow and extends into the bowl; it is cylindrical in shape and has a conical base. At its base, the stem is trimmed with a glass ring, trimmed around the rim with small lozenges, which serves as a foot. The underside has a conical depression, with a trace of glass pumice; the decoration is applied and pinched. The glass stem is trimmed with two rows of pastilles arranged in a staggered pattern; the face of these pastilles ends in a drop of drawn glass; the top of the stem is adorned with a small horizontal ring. The foot is a glass ring with small lozenges all around.
